XPO NAMED 23RD LARGEST WOMEN-OWNED BUSINESS IN LA

Los Angeles Business Journal Publishes 2009 List

Torrance, Calif. – Sept., 2009 – XPO, a leading provider of international and domestic mailing services, announced today its new higher rankings in the Los Angeles Business Journal's list of top Women-Owned Businesses located in Los Angeles. The list ranked XPO the 23rd largest for all types of businesses. XPO grew at a rate of 29%, more than three times the 8% average of the top 100's growth rate, making them the sixth fastest growing company on this elite list.

“This higher ranking carries extra significance for XPO. Although we have always been a women-owned business, we were just officially certified this year. Since receiving the formal certification, it has qualified us for additional business which is significantly contributing to our rapid growth,” said Kelly Herold-Martinez, CEO of XPO. “We take great pride in this accomplishment which we attribute to offering our customers customized mailing solutions with all-inclusive, lower pricing than the competition. It's a combination that is particularly appealing in this economy.”

The list's rankings were based on 2008 revenues compared to 2007. To qualify, companies must be at least 50% women-owned. XPO was founded in 2003, primarily by a group of women who were industry veterans searching for alternative mailing solutions to what was then currently available. Within the business category of mailing and logistics, XPO is one of the largest women-owned businesses in the world.
